

Should the Health Care Reform Bill be Repealed?

YES – 44%

Some parts are good, but overall, my access to and quality of healthcare will go down under this plan.

It is unfair to force people to purchase insurance, as it is their right to assess their risk and decide not to participate. Coddling just creates irresponsibility.

It's bad for our health, bad for doctors, terrible for the economy. Socialism; pure and simple.

What is missing is tort reform, test utilization guidelines and practice guidelines or pathways for diagnosis, so that physicians stop over-utilizing health services

Yes...for many reasons but especially because those who oppose abortion should not have to pay for it.

Unfortunately, the new federal health-care reform act is a political document rather than a thoughtful approach to effectively address the key issues of health-care which are access and cost.

It should be repealed and replaced with a workable and fair document that is approved by bi-partisanship cooperation.

Drawn up and pushed through too fast. We need reform, but done in a logical, beneficial, and accountable way.

Repeal it and then parts of it should be re-introduced.

We need a health care reform act that deals with achievable goals. We should tackle medical malpractice reform and regulate the insurance companies to eliminate pre-existing conditions and allow national sales of insurance.

Yes - And all the Senators and Congressman should be on the same choice of Healthcare Plans as the rest of us!

NO – 54%

I know its going to be painful but why would you want to keep a broken healthcare system?

You can tell a lot about a country by how it treats its animals, its sick, and its poor.

It seems we want our people to be sick and illiterate. What does that say for our future in America???

No - Enact it quicker to save lives.

It doesn't do enough, but it's better than the mess we've had.

What's so great about paying a LOT of money and then have the insurance company tell you what they won't cover?

We are the only industrialized nation in the world without a comprehensive health care system for all our citizens.

Hell no - the right is in the pocket of the insurance companies and does not care about the poor.

It is not perfect and will require adjustments but it is the right thing to do and is long overdue.

No one has come up with anything better. Too many people are comfortable with what they have and don't care about the rest of the citizens.

We need to start reform. The first draft of any new program is never perfect.

Yes, the bill needs some work, but let's not "throw out the baby with the bath water."

Progress isn't always pleasant, but its progress.

Absolutely not! We finally have a chance to get it right, to offer affordable health-care to everyone.
